Length	Style	Guidelines
12-14 inches	Collar	Collar necklaces should lie snugly around the middle of the neck, and can be worn with V-neck, boat-neck and off-the-shoulder tops.
16 inches	Choker	Chokers fall perfectly at the base of the neck, and look great with strapless or plunging necklines.
18 inches	Princess	Princess length necklaces (17 to 19 inches) fall just below the throat. This is the most common and versatile length of necklace. It can be worn with most necklines except the high ones. Add a pendant and wear with a V-neck for a pretty look.
20 inches	Matinee	Matinee length necklaces (20 to 24 inches) hit the top of the bust, and it's best not to wear this length with plunging necklines. If the necklace hits the very top of your neckline, it will be fighting for attention with your top.
30 inches	Opera	Opera length necklaces (28 to 34 inches) fall below the bust and look great with a very high neckline. They can be worn from day to evening. This length can also be doubled for a multi-strand look.
Other considerations:	Bold Designs	Less is more. Focus on one piece (chucky necklace and small earrings, chunky bracelet, small necklace and earrings, etc.) When wearing big and bold pieces, don't wear prints because they don't play well together. Sleek all black and all white (or monochromatic pseudo neutrals) look great with big or colorful jewelry.
	Mixing Metals	Ok if you keep the style of the jewelry the same. You can even layer gold, copper, and silver necklaces for a fashion-forward look.
	Accentuate Positive	Chokers are made for women with more youthful skin. Women with aging necks will want longer chains and necklaces to draw attention away from any neck imperfections.
	Wide Necks	Balance by wearing graduated necklaces, which are very thin around the side of the neck and larger below the collarbone.
	Long Thin Necks	Try a triple-strand necklace, with the shortest strand hugging the base of the throat. Avoid V-shaped chains
